

125A RBG

Ruth Bader Ginsburg was appointed to the Supreme Court by President Bill Clinton in 1993, becoming the second woman justice to sit on the nation's highest court. She is a force to be reckoned with.

RBG has a number of different collars she adds to her judge's robes, including the famous "dissenting collar" on my figure. This collar is one she wears when delivering an opinion of dissent, or disagreement, in court. She also wore it the day after Trump's election.

Ginsburg co-founded the first U.S. law journal to focus exclusively on women's rights. And as director of the ACLU's Women's Rights Project, she argued six gender discrimination cases before the Supreme Court, winning five.

One of my most admired personal heroes, RBG was the first female professor at Columbia Law School to earn tenure. She has led the way to change laws that affect the culture of women's rights and gender discrimination.

In her words, "Women will have achieved true equality when men share with them the responsibility of bringing up the next generation."
